

Abstract

Entertainment movie unit for use within a restaurant

A method for providing entertainment inside a restaurant includes a portable DVD player mounted on a sliding wooden tray underneath a table or booth inside the restaurant. The customers of the restaurant choose what movie they would like to view from a menu while dining at the restaurant by contacting the waiter. The waiter selects the DVD movie and inserts it in the portable DVD player by sliding the wooden tray from underneath the table or booth. The customers then proceed to view the DVD movie with a remote that is given to them by the waiter. Once the customer(s) is ready to leave the restaurant, the customer is given the bill and leaves the DVD movie for the waiter to collect, and closes the portable DVD player along with sliding the wooden tray back underneath the table or booth. The portable DVD player is securely fixed underneath the table with an anti-theft wire.

References

3979156	Sept., 1976	Gross.	4369948	Jan., 1983	Kraus.
4062606	Dec., 1977	Peets.	4449762	May., 1984	Turner.
4066305	Jan., 1978	Gazarek.	4482064	Nov., 1984	Berke, et al.
4316082	Feb., 1982	Fritz.	4496200	Jan., 1985	Hagstrom et al.
4345803	Aug., 1982	Heck.	4511111	Apr., 1985	Godfrey et al.